

Report on ISPRS 2018

Maki Kishimoto

Tokyo Institute of Technology

Attending ISPRS 2018, which was joint Conference this year, I have gained wide range of a knowledge on researches in friendly atmosphere.

About my presentation

I also discuss on my research with some attendees. By earning the best oral presentation award, I gained great confidence.

About other presentation

I learned about recent results on human presence detection, which are one of my project currently in progress, and was able to notice the problem of the research. On the other hand, attending presentations on studies outside my field increased my knowledge and expand the range of my research interest. I was also strongly inspired by discussions with other attendees, especially young researchers, while coffee breaks and lunches.

I would like to express my appreciation to the Evaluations Committee of The ISPRS Foundation (TIF) for giving me this fruitful opportunity.

Presenting my research result.

In the awards ceremony.
